BY S. S. BANDALL.

A brief recapitulation of the leading arguments in behalf of the liberal endowment and support of public and free schools may not be inappropriate at this stage of the discussion.

In the first place, it is claimed that the right of every child in the community to such an education of the community of the school of the community of the school of the community of the school of the cation as shall be adequate to the discharge of the various obligations and responsibilities inci-dent to human life, in all its relations, individual and social, should be distinctly recognised and efficiently guarantied by the highest civil au-thority; and that the means of securing such an education should be furnished partly from the public funds, and partly, and to such extent as may be requisite, by an equal and just assessment upon the property of the community at

In support of this claim it is insisted that in a republican government, where all political power emanates, directly or indirectly, from the people themselves, education is absolutely indispensable, and of vital and paramount importance; that from the earliest period of our existence as a people this principle has been recognised and acted upon by those communities where the greatest moral, social, and political improvement has been made; that it has taken root and flourhas been made; that it has taken root and nour-ished wherever the great body of the people have tasted its advantages and afforded it a scope for the development of its capabilities; and that wherever it has been introduced and obtained a firm foothold it has never been abandoned. It is alleged that upon the general prevalence of in-telligence and virtue, of sound science and un-corrupted morality, not only the happiness and welfare of each individual of the community, but the very foundations of society, essentially de-pend; and hence that the first and highest and most imperative duty of the citizens of a free commonwealth is, in the language of the Father of his Country, to "promote, as an object of PARAMOUNT IMPORTANCE, the diffusion of useful knowledge;" that the wealth and resources of the community can in no mode be so profitably and advantageously invested, even in a mere pe-cuniary point of view; and that every dollar which is contributed to the mental and moral culture of the rising generation at that important period when the rudiments of character are in process of formation, and the foundations of future usefulness being laid, is an actual saving of hundreds and thousands, which, in the absence or neglect of such culture, must be lavished in a few brief years in the conviction and punishment of crime, or in the support of mendicants and paupers.

It is further contended that, while the legislative and municipal authority of every community undoubtedly possesses the power of repressing every infraction of its laws and ordinances, and of imposing upon the whole body of its citizens an annual tax for defraying the heavy expendi-ture incident to the administration of criminal justice, it as undoubtedly possesses the power of prevention, in the provision of early and ample facilities for the education and instruction of its youth, thereby removing every inducement and inclination to vice and crime, and substituting in its stead nobler and higher aims, purer aspirations, and wiser and better motives of action and that the obvious dictates of mere worldly policy, no less than those of sound and enlight-ened political economy, point to the expediency and salutary efficacy of such ample provision for the intellectual and moral instruction of the rising generation, as shall preclude the necessity of an mmensely greater outlay for their future punishment and support as convicts or paupers.

And, finally, it is claimed, on the united and concurring testimony of the wisest, most experienced, and competent observers, and as the result of researches based upon the soundest deductions of reason, and the most extended and comprehensive practical acquaintance with the subject, that, by the universal education of the children of the community during the period or-dinarily devoted to elementary instruction in our public schools, and under the guidance of teachers thoroughly competent to the performance of the duties devolved upon them, ninety-nine out of every hundred of the children thus trained would become "honest dealers, conscientious ju-rors, true witnesses, incorruptible voters or magistrates, good parents, good neighbors, good members of society; temperate, industrious, and frugal; conscientious in all their dealings; prompt to pity and instruct ignorance; public-spirited, philanthropic, and observers of all things sa-

These are some of the advantages and blessings which the advocates of UNIVERSAL EDUCA-TION, through an enlightened system of public schools, free to all, propose to secure; the nution of vice and crime, by the effectual removal of every inducement to their perpetration, rly formation of ha sitions at variance with their existence; the prevention of pauperism and mendicity by the be stowment of the power and the will to accomplish all the necessary objects of human existence: and the general prevalence of integrity, humani ty, benevolence, industry, and public and private morality, by the timely and assiduous inculcation of all those pure and elevating principles which refine and ennoble our common nature.

In my next, and in a few succeeding communications, I shall advert to the nature and course of instruction which should prevail in our public schools, and to the character and qualifications

"A charming book, full of deep, true, and glowing sentiment, with lively glimpses of character, pen-portraits and sketches, which keep the interest ever alive, and with a wise instruction is so happily blended that the pleasure of the book is only equalled by its profit. It is a better book than "The Wide, Wide World," which has been so widely and justly popular, and we are sure that those who read this will be glad that we have called their attention to it."—

HE LOST SENSES: DEAFNESS AND BLIND

THE LOST SENSES: DEAFNESS AND BLIND-NESS. By Dr. Kitto.

"This is a work of great interest, from one of the most learned and accomplished writers of the sgc, revealing the mysteries of the world in which those live who have been deprived of the sense of sight or hearing. Ever since his boyhood, for more than thirty years, Dr. Kitto has passed a life of great activity as a scholar, in a state of the most intense deafness to which any living creature can be subjected. His account of himself, and of his discriminating remarks on the condition of the blind, (James Mitchell, Laura Bridgeman, and others,) are replete with profound thought on the interesting phenomenon presented in the progress of their mental training."—Christian Observer.

Classical & Mathematical School.

THE subscriber proposes to open in the city of Washington, on the 13th of September, a Classical and Mathematical School of a high order. For this purpose he has secured a central and very desirable location on the south side of F street, three doors west from 13th.

The number of pupils will be limited to twenty. To these he will devote his exclusive attentien, in preparing them for college or for business and professional pursuits.

It is the design to make this a permanent Classical and Mathematical School, with a number so limited that each pupil may receive a large share of the teacher's attention; and the result of his own experience and that of others convince him that he can in this way accomplish much more for their mental and moral improvement, and for their thorough and rapid progress in study, than can be done in a school of a larger number or of a more miscellaneous character.

From the views expressed to the subscriber by intelligent persons, it is believed there are many in this city who desire the establishment of such a school at the present time; and all of his energies, guided by his past experience in the instruction of youth, will be devoted to making it, in all respects, worthy of the confidence and patronage of those who may be disposed to place their sons under his charge.
